

Ayupov Orif (1906-2000) was an Uzbek journalist. He was born in Tashkent city. He studied at the new school "Namuna" (1918-1923), graduated the second course of the pedagogical department of SAGU (1925-1926), was sent to the city of Samarkand, from there to Khiva a pass to the city was given. He worked as a head of seven year's school in Khiva for (1926-1928), a teacher at the Women's Educational Institute (1928-1930), assistant to the secretary-in-charge of the newspaper "Sharq haqiqati" (1930), editor in the agricultural department of the Republican Radio Committee (1930-1935), literary employee of "Qizil O'zbekiston" newspaper (1935-1937), responsible secretary of "Yangi hayot" newspaper (1937-1939), responsible secretary of "O'zbekiston sotsialistik qishloq xo'jaligi" magazine (1941), after the closure of the magazine, he worked as a cultural and educational supervisor in the organization "Tashtranssoyuz" (1942), served in the Labor Army (1942-1944), was appointed as a teacher at school No. 135 by the Commissariat of Education. (1942-1946), secretary-in-charge at "O'qituvchilar gazetasi" (1948 until November 3), then senior editor in the educational department of the State Publishing House (1949). He was imprisoned by the NKVD on November 5, 1949. He was exiled to a correctional labor camp for 10 years by the Special Council of the Communist Party of the USSR on charges of non-Soviet propaganda and spreading false news. On December 6, 1954, the work was suspended by the decision of the Council of the Central Commission for the review of the cases of prisoners held for counter-revolutionary crimes in the camps and prisons of the Ministry of Internal Affairs of the USSR, and the verdict of the Special Council of the USSR on October 14, 1950 was canceled.